THE FEMALE BODY

WHAT ARTISTS
WANTED TO MAKE OF US

Since prehistoric times and the Venus of Willendorf, women have been the object of fantasies. Goddesses or prostitutes, virgins or witches, loving mothers or sexualized daughters: they have been portrayed, put on display, and overexposed from a predominantly masculine point of view. With stunning iconography, from Botticelli to Cindy Sherman, Picasso to Frida Kahlo, and many other illustrious artists, this book is an account of the evolution of women's status, a journey through their sexual and political emancipation.

YUKICHI WATABE

*For the first time ever, a photographer is allowed

A CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION

A CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION

Watabe followed the inspector as he questioned witnesses (workers in a tannery factory, local police officers, etc.) and pounded the streets of Tokyo's most squalid neighborhoods – its bars, bridges, alleyways, and hospitals – in search of the killer. Watabe's images record far more than simply a police investigation; they reveal Tokyo in the 1950s in a way that has rarely been shown before.

AINSI DE SUITE

AND SO FORTH

This book picks up where M'as-tu vue, the first retrospective of the artist's works between 1979 and 2003, left off, and which ended with Unfinished. And So Forth begins with this series and carries on through current projects, featuring both finished works and photographs of Sophie Calle's art exhibits, many of which have never been seen before. Extensive interviews between the artist and writer Marie Desplechin act as a common thread for the reader's immersion in Sophie Calle's rich oeuvre, through a thematic itinerary that brings together nearly thirty series.

DES OISEAUX LEILA JEFFREYS

BIRDS,
LEILA JEFFREYS

Having cultivated the art of waiting, Leila Jeffreys presents a gallery of whimsical yet extremely realistic portraits, where birds come attired in their most beautiful finery and sumptuous, colorful plumage. One by one, each of them reveals their distinctive characters: graceful, mischievous, shy, proud, timid, swaggering, and each one seems to want to chat with the reader. Her work emphasizes how humans anthropomorphize animals, and showcases all that we truly have in common.

DES OISEAUX PENTTI SAMMALLAHTI

BIRDS,
PENTTI
SAMMALLAHTI

Coastlines, ponds, parks, endless plains, forest clearings, snowy landscapes... In these isolated areas throughout the world, birds mischievously and poetically reveal their presence. Like visual stories, Pentti Sammallahti's black and white photographs attest to his extraordinary eye for detail, to light that sculpts spaces, to silent expanses in which a human or animal presence may appear at any second. The experience of the image is twofold: beyond its narrative virtuosity, the use of a two-color process, with immaculate whites (as in the plumage of the swans or pink flamingos) confronted with deep blacks, creates a play of textures and powerfully renders a world in which birds play a unique role.

DES OISEAUX TERRI WEIFENBACH

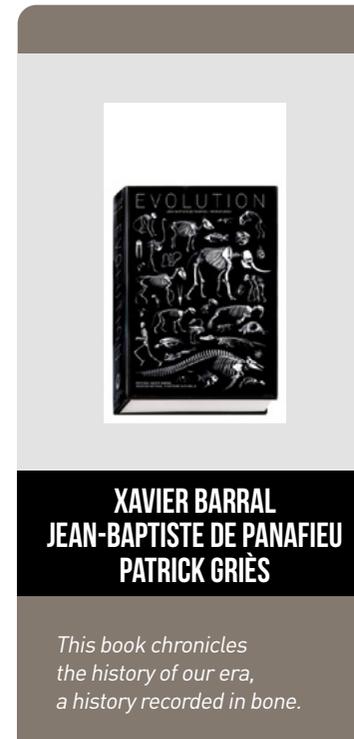

BIRDS, TERRI WEIFENBACH

Oscillating between fantasy and reality, these photographs appear to have been taken surreptitiously as birds race by at top speed, dance through the sky, land, hold absolutely still, and gather in parliaments. As the seasons follow one another, the colors of the garden vary. Light and saturated colors, contrasts between blurred and crystal-clear details, and freeze frames delicately depict a vivid reality. Created in her personal garden in Washington DC, Terri Weifenbach's photographs immerse us in the infinitely small, transporting us into a particularly lively and marvelous world. This publication is part of the Birds collection, which celebrates their essential yet vulnerable presence in today's world, as seen through the eyes of different artists.

ÉVOLUTION

EVOLUTION

Spectacular, mysterious, elegant, or grotesque, the skeletons of vertebrates that populate the Earth today carry within them the traces of evolution that span several billion years. The theory of evolution set forth by Charles Darwin in the 19th century has, for the most part, been confirmed and enriched by the discovery of genes, advances in life sciences, paleontology, and embryology. This book assesses this scientific reality. It presents a broad panorama of the realm of vertebrates, the zoological group which we ourselves belong to. This relationship becomes obvious once we observe the internal structure of animals and come to understand the mechanisms of evolution and its various aspects. Most contemporary vertebrates presented in this book come from the collections of the comparative anatomy gallery at the National Museum of Natural History in Paris.

FLORAE

FLORAE

Since ancient times, philosophers, artists, scientists, explorers, and collectors have been examining, celebrating, and attempting to unlock the mysteries of flowers. What secrets do they hold? The subject of numerous studies, flowers have aroused many questions about the origins of life, and give evidence of our relationship to nature. Science meets art history in this publication, which invites us on a voyage through the world's oldest herbariums, Middle-Age illuminations, gardens of Chinese emperors and oriental sultans, the whimsical floral clock imagined by Carl Linné, and famous vellum manuscripts of the National Museum of History in Paris...

L'INTÉRIEUR DE LA NUIT

IN THE HEART OF THE DARK NIGHT

A keen observer of the animal world and pioneer of wildlife photography, George Shiras was also the first photographer, at the turn of the 20th century, to reveal the nocturnal lives of forest animals through astonishing flash photography. From mobile shots taken from his canoe to photographic tricks he developed (when the animal itself triggers the shot by running into a tripwire), he was able to take pictures of deer, lynx, porcupines, and various birds. In an intimate format, this first-of-its-kind monograph presents a selection of these photographs, enriched with a poetic essay by philosopher and writer Jean-Christophe Bailly.

INDIA

INDIA

These images attest to the photographer's singularity: his interest in storytelling, public spaces, and unexpected scenes. Harry Gruyaert has always felt the need to travel, in order to experience the world and express himself through images. From Gujarat to Kerala, he has succeeded in capturing something quintessential about this country of multiple legends. Streets teeming with activity in New Delhi and Calcutta, humble villages in Tamil Nadu and Rajasthan, narrow ghats of the great religious cities of Benares and Varanasi... Women in saffron and purple saris beating grain, cloth dyers hard at work over steaming vats, an encampment of nomadic shepherds settling in at twilight... The air is saturated with colors, light, noise, and sometimes even silence.

SERGIO LARRAIN, AGNÈS SIRE

A new, enhanced edition of the photographer's first major essay.

LONDRES. 1959

LONDON. 1959

A member of the Magnum Agency, Sergio Larrain only went to London once in the late 1950s, at a time when the country was in the throes of deep social and cultural transformation. From this journey, the photographer brought back a series of images that offer an extraordinarily powerful vision of the city, at once deeply rooted in its traditions, but also open to the modernity of the post-war period. He reveals, through his lens, the signs of an emerging new London society, in its streets, parks, pubs, and clubs, capturing the class divisions, the burgeoning fashions of its youth, and the everyday life of Londoners entering a new decade: the 60s.

"Her life did not appear in my work, and that annoyed her. When I set up my camera at the foot of the bed in which she lay dying – fearing that she would pass away in my absence, whereas I wanted to be present to hear her last words – she exclaimed, 'Finally.'" In this exceptional volume, designed by the artist, Sophie Calle describes her mother Monique through excerpts from personal notebooks and photographs from family albums, and presents her art exhibit, created at the Palais de Tokyo in homage to her mother, who died in 2007.

} LA LECTURE DES PIERRES

READING
THE STONES

A man of letters and a companion of the surrealist movement, at a very young age Roger Caillois became interested in the mineral world, whose forms evoked imaginary figures to him. From the 1950s onwards, he started to collect minerals from all over the world, "curious stones that attract attention owing to some anomaly in their shape or some meaningful oddity in design or color." All of them have "an unexpected resemblance, one that is improbable and yet natural, which provokes fascination." This visual tour of Roger Caillois' collection is accompanied by the re-edition of his famous texts: Stones, The Writing of Stones, and Paradoxical Agates. Book produced in collaboration with the National Museum of Natural History of Paris (MNHN), which received a donation for a large part of the collection."

RUINES

RUINS

In 28 years of travels across 20 countries, Koudelka has photographed over 200 archaeological sites, using an identical panoramic format. For some of them, he returned several times in search of the "right picture." Beyond the romantic and picturesque view of these sites, Koudelka's fragmented, astonishing compositions, often just above ground level with high-angle or low-angle shots, as well as his powerfully contrasted blacks and whites, allow us to rediscover legendary places like Delphi and Pompeii. Among Koudelka's photographs, some of them show sites, such as Palmyra or Bosra, before they were damaged or destroyed during recent Middle Eastern conflicts.

The German missionary Martin Gusinde was one of the only anthropologists to successfully conduct an in-depth study of the Selk'nam, Yamana, and Kawésqar cultures.

L'ESPRIT DES HOMMES DE LA TERRE DE FEU

THE SPIRIT OF MEN IN TIERRA DEL FUEGO

What might have remained a classic example of a missionary's ethnographic journey emerges today as an unprecedented experience in the field. Martin Gusinde was so deeply immersed within these societies, that he became fluent in their languages and was even introduced to the Hain initiation rite. The 1,200 photographs he brought back with him constitute a unique tribute to these populations that have now disappeared.

ESSAYS AND ANATOMICAL TREATISES

The anatomical plates of Jacques-Fabien Gautier d'Agoty (1711-1785) fascinate historians and art lovers as much as they do doctors and surgeons. Gautier d'Agoty, an engraver, was passionate about reproducing works of art and science. For these paintings, he developed the four-color printing technique that gives his prints such undeniable beauty. His treatises - Complete Myology, Anatomy of the Head, General Anatomy of the Viscera, Hermaphrodite and Anatomical Exposition of the Structure of the Human Body - are reproduced here in their entirety: 68 full-page color plates accompanied by the modernized version of their captions.

HYPNOSIS

ART AND HYPNOTISM, FROM MESMER TO PRESENT DAY

Hypnosis, rarely mentioned in the history of art, is currently experiencing a resurgence of interest. Little credit seems to be given to the role that hypnosis has played in the field of creation, where it has nevertheless been omnipresent, as seen in the work of Gustave Courbet, Auguste Rodin, Salvador Dali, Andy Warhol, and Tony Oursler. At the historical crossroads of several fields - art, science, and popular culture - this richly illustrated book shows how the search for efficiency in art has asserted itself throughout modern times, by giving the imagination a prominent role in the creation of the timeless works that fascinate us.

RU XIAO FAN
AN ODE TO MOVEMENT

The artist offers an initiatory and poetic journey among his paintings, drawings, and studies. Here we discover 72 figures of Luohan (disciple of Buddha), a character with a flower-shaped head made of Jingdezhen porcelain, surrounded by cooking bowls in Song ovens. Like an ode to movement, each of the figures, weightlessly positioned on crystal balls, appears to fly over the sea or through the sky.

› FUCKING GOOD QUESTION

"Fucking good question!" exclaims Johnny Depp upon discovering this choice. And so it begins: thanks to this preliminary snapshot, Jean-François creates a climate of confidence between the photographer and his model, a bond that changes everything about the shooting session to come. The results of this brilliant idea are portraits of a rare authenticity, praised since the 1990's until today. Elle, M le Magazine (le Monde), Télérama, Libération, Les Inrockuptibles, GQ, Madame Figaro, Marie Claire... In the margins of each image, Jean-François Robert discreetly invites us to his side, and shares moments of grace experienced during his photo sessions.

JEAN-FRANÇOIS ROBERT

In order to make his portraits of stars as beautiful as possible, the photographer first asks them to pose like one of the three wise monkeys: hiding their eyes, mouth, or ears.

I LISTENED TO THE ALPS

Global warming causes mountain temperatures to rise twice as fast. And it is more than just a question of thermometers. It's not just about melting glaciers. Cracks are forming in mountain peaks. Rocks are beginning to break off. Landslides are becoming increasingly frequent. Entire rock faces are crumbling. Mountaineering routes are turning into labyrinths. Water is becoming scarce. Ecosystems are disrupted. Seen from below, this apocalypse is soundless. But collapsology scientists have but to take a cable car to validate their theories. The rise in sea level may still be years away, but our peace of mind is silently turning to dust.

› ATLAS DES TRÉSORS DISPARUS

THE ATLAS OF LOST TREASURES

We will never find the Holy Grail or El Dorado. However, we may discover the stolen Van Gogh in a Dutch museum during the Coronavirus epidemic! A lesser-known work, the 15th-century Chinese encyclopedia that was the most extensive source of information until the advent of Wikipedia, was mostly destroyed during a fire in 1900. Equally unexpected is a submerged cypress forest in Alabama, which could very well hold the key to an invaluable pharmacological treasure. Confronted by the disappearance of biodiversity, an island in the northern regions of Norway shelters the underground World Seed Reserve. Indeed, some treasures may miraculously resurface, like the codices of Leonardo da Vinci, victims for over 300 years of a filing error at the National Library of Madrid.

POUR EN FINIR AVEC LA NATURE MORTE

THE STILL LIFE REVISITED

This book invites us to reconsider both the history and the geography of representational art, from cave paintings to non-Western traditions. It draws connections between modern and ancient art and traces the tensions between wealth and poverty, possession and observation, as manifested in collections of tools, weapons, clothes, ornaments, game, and other foods. Laurence Bertrand Dorléac refers to the work of sculptors, photographers, and movie-makers as well as painters, and draws on contemporary philosophy, poetry, and literature to capture the spirit of the time.
