A book to learn how to move like an animal!

› J'AI LA BOUGEOTTE !

ANTS IN MY PANTS!

Can you stand on one leg like a flamingo? Yawn like a hippopotamus? Move backwards like a crayfish? Scratch your back like a bear? In this playful book, with charming pastel illustrations, children discover the world of animals as well as their own bodies: the character on the left-hand page reproduces the animal's movements on the right-hand page, and the reader can too! A fun read that's sure to inspire bonding moments between parents and children.

› RÉSIDENCE BEAU SÉJOUR

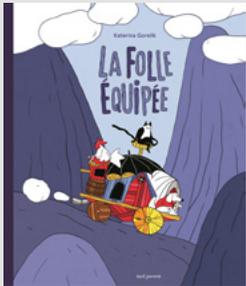

BEAU SÉJOUR RESIDENCE

It's official: the new favorite animal of little girls and boys everywhere is the soft-haired bigluffur. Unicorns are a thing of the past! While waiting to reclaim their former glory, the unicorns will therefore enjoy a well-deserved rest at the Beau Séjour Residence. With a swimming pool, a spa, fitness classes, a hairdresser, a tea room, and shows and various activities, life at the residence is a dream for the unicorns and other animals that have fallen from grace... Well, almost...

› LA FOLLE ÉQUIPÉE

CRAZY CART

Once upon a time, a rooster, a dog, and a cat lived together in a lovely small house. But when a hurricane devastates their home, they set off on a makeshift cart in search of a new place to live. At the end, when our heroes are attacked by a pack of wolves, the stunned reader suddenly sees the cart transforming itself, and realizes that there are now 10 friends instead of 3! Now start the book over and you'll see the cart gradually change while animals join this crazy expedition.

MARC DANIAU

Become an elephant expert with this magnificent reference book!

› ÉLÉPHANTS DE A À Z

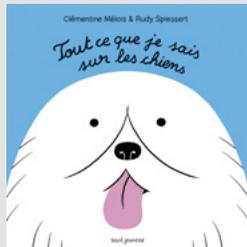

ELEPHANTS FROM A TO Z

Did you know that elephants are scared of bees and not mice, or that they can be as quiet as a cat? Combining narratives of all kinds (excerpts from the author's diaries from his travels in Africa, a short story from Kipling, and other extraordinary stories), scholarly information, and anecdotes, the goal of this elephant "encyclopedia" is to be both exhaustive and atypical.

EVERYTHING I KNOW ABOUT DOGS

In this book, a little boy introduces us to his dog Tubby. That's his name because he has a big tummy. He doesn't always smell very good, he snores, he sounds like a washing machine when he breathes, and he eats shoes. He annoys grownups and doesn't really serve much of a purpose, but we love him so much!

HIMBOO HUMBOO

Himboo Humboo is a very friendly and very furry monster. But this morning, Himboo Humboo is in a bad mood. He's having trouble reading the newspaper. From the editor-in-chief to the doctor, from the doctor to the specialist, Himboo Humboo searches in vain for the solution to his problem. Finally, thanks to the perspicacity of a little human, he finally gets the answer: it's not a big deal; he's just become shortsighted! There's no doubt about it, life is clearer and more colorful with glasses!

Get ready for a wonderful journey alongside this little man. Don't take your eyes off of his suitcase!

› DANS SA VALISE

IN THE SUITCASE

Once upon a time, there was a little man who was packing his suitcase to go on a trip. Sailing the open seas, climbing mountains, and diving into the depths of the ocean, the little man (and the reader with him!) discovers one surprise after another. We progress through the book by lifting flaps (more than 35!), which work as obstacles that our little man must overcome to continue his journey. Throughout his adventures, he'll need the objects in his suitcase to move forward, but he'll also find new items to tuck inside. What will be left inside at the end of the trip?!

› LA DOUBLE VIE DE MÉDOR

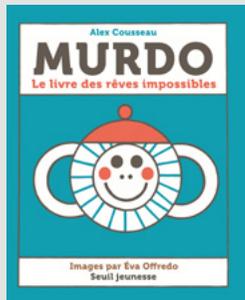

MEDOR'S DOUBLE LIFE

A starving and scraggy wolf is dragging himself around town, looking for something to eat. Drawn by a delicious aroma, he scratches at the door of a luxurious mansion. A nice lady, thinking he is an abandoned dog, takes him in and decides to adopt him. But in exchange for a full belly, he will have to make a serious effort. And what would happen if the old lady were to die? Would he be able to control his wild instincts?

MURDO: THE BOOK OF IMPOSSIBLE DREAMS

Murdo, an imaginary little yeti, is the narrator of this collection of short stories. Each page describes one of his dreams: to knit a sweater with the words of a poem, to hide in a shoe, to confide in a pebble, to eat an "everything" sandwich, to build a bridge between day and night... Illustrated by Eva Offredo's simple and mischievous artwork, Alex Cousseau magnificently conveys all of the poetry of childhood.

OOLIVIA THE OWL

Oolivia, a majestic barn owl, observes the world from up high on her branch. She usually pays no attention to humans, but she's been intrigued by a little girl. This little human is not like the others: she likes to go out at night and isn't scared of the dark. She knows how to greet the trees and how to listen to the sounds of the forest. An odd friendship will grow between them. One night, when the little girl is chased down by a wild sow, Oolivia will help her find her way back home.

OUR FORT

It's the holidays! The sun is shining and the grass is high in the fields. Each day, 3 friends meet up and walk through the countryside to go to their fort. But one day, the wind is blowing and the branches are shaking in the trees... A storm is coming! The walk is thus transformed into a great adventure as the peaceful countryside becomes a threatening landscape full of perils. The 3 friends will remain united, hand in hand, until they reach their shelter and find out if the fort survived the storm...

PROUD TO BE AN ONLY CHILD (BUT NOT FOR MUCH LONGER!)

Our narrator is an only child and he likes it that way! Why would he want to have a little brother or sister? His parents adore and spoil him. A lot of his friends aren't so lucky and have to put up with a brother, or worse, a sister! Sharing toys? Not being the center of the world? No thanks! But the narrator appears to be in total denial. He doesn't want to see what seems obvious to the reader: he is about to lose his only-child status (and it's for the best!)

THE BLUE SKY

A caterpillar emerges from its egg and begins to discover the world around him. At first, everything is blurry. All of the sounds, sights, and smells blend together. But page after page, the universe gradually comes into focus. On the left, we follow the caterpillar's evolution. On the right, in beautiful grayscale pictures, we observe nature through the animal's eyes.

WITCHES! A HISTORY OF WITCHES IN ART

The witch has existed throughout history. For children, she is a fantastical creature amongst others. However, this is far from being the case. As the ultimate object of fear, she has taken on different faces throughout history: from the powerful and devouring woman to the ugly old lady in fairy tales or a naive girl allegedly possessed by the Devil, the figure of the witch has inspired many artists and is currently in the process of being redeemed.
