DOMINIQUE COLLIN

Christianity must at last assume the improbable character of its word.

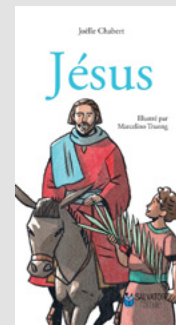

LE CHRISTIANISME N'EXISTE PAS ENCORE

CHRISTIANITY DOES NOT YET EXIST

Søren Kierkegaard wrote, "The Christianity of the New Testament no longer exists". This provocative thesis reminds us that cultural Christianity is an optical illusion which allows us to neglect the fact that we are not Christians in the sense of the New Testament. Christianity must at last assume the improbable character of its word, which, up until now, it has sought to render probable for fear of failing to pass it on. Dominique Collin is a Dominican, philosopher, and theologian.

MAN: WONDER OF GOD

AN ESSAY ON CHRISTOLOGICAL ANTHROPOLOGY

There are multiple visions of mankind today. So what is the meaning of "anthropology" when based on the Christian faith? To what extent is man the wonder of God when his identity is under threat from the emergence of transhumanism, theories of gender, and scientific or technical progress? A Jesuit, Father Bernard Sesboüé is one of the great contemporary theologians and the author of many works.

FABRICE HADJADJ

Can God be a topic of conversation?

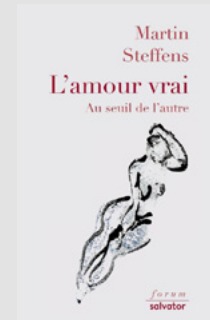

› COMMENT PARLER DE DIEU AUJOURD'HUI

TALKING ABOUT GOD TODAY

Can God be a topic of conversation to be slipped in between last night's soccer game and the weather report? Would it be better to discuss Him in a learned manner, somewhere between Kant's antinomies and Nietzsche's genealogies? Wouldn't that diminish God instead of exalting Him? Or honor Him when the goal is to be rid of Him for good? Fabrice Hadjadj is an essayist and playwright.

Advocacy for true love against pornography.

› L'AMOUR VRAI : AU SEUIL DE L'AUTRE

TRUE LOVE AT THE THRESHOLD OF ANOTHER

"There is a grain of truth in pornography, otherwise it could not kindle my desire. The part of truth it holds captive is love itself. But love in the strong sense, in the true sense: love absolutely given and absolutely received. The sort of love that used to be called charity." Martin Steffens is an associate professor of philosophy.
