CÉCILE VIDAL

This dialogue between national historiographies provides a fresh look at the processes that formed new kinds of societies in the Americas in the modern period.

› UNE HISTOIRE SOCIALE DU NOUVEAU MONDE

A SOCIAL HISTORY OF THE NEW WORLD

In 1503, the expression "New World" appeared for the first time, referring to the Americas that the Spaniards and then the Portuguese had been exploring and colonizing since 1492. These territories constituted new worlds, as much for the Europeans who chose to settle there as for the Africans who were transported by force, and the Amerindians who were confronted with these populations. This colonialism gave rise to the construction of totally new multi-ethnic societies, often through violence.

MOMENTS IN LIFE

In this book, Arlette Farge recounts the twists of fate and chance encounters that have punctuated her career as a historian: her struggles to write a history that takes into account the relationships between men and women; her taste for archives following her discovery of 18th-century judicial documents; her commitment to writing the history of those who have been forgotten or whom we have neither wanted to hear nor see; and finally, the attention she pays to writing, language, and the different ways of telling history.

› PIERRO DELLA FRANCESCA :
UNE CONVERSION DU REGARD

PIERRO DELLA FRANCESCA A CONVERSION OF THE EYE

This work returns to one of the best-kept pictorial enigmas of the Italian Renaissance: the painting known as the Flagellation of Christ, painted by Piero della Francesca in the mid-15th century. By investigating this painting from the inside, Franck Mercier highlights the originality of a pictorial approach that closely combines the new rigors of a mathematical perception of space with strong spiritual demands, influenced by Saint Augustine and Nicholas of Cusa.

The story of a great sociologist, showing that even just claiming to be a "religious believer" establishes a specific relationship to the world.

› RELIGION, UTOPIE ET MÉMOIRE

RELIGION, UTOPIA, AND MEMORY

Danièle Hervieu-Léger has been exploring the future of religions in contemporary Western societies for 50 years. Having made the Catholic scene her main field of reflection, she moves away from the classical prism of the secularization of the modern world to consider "faith" as a relationship to time, space, and the world. In this interview, she describes her personal, spiritual, political, and professional journey.

JULIETTE CADIDIOT

A reflection on theft as a system of social relations, indicative of the ambivalence of the relationship to the norm.

LA SOCIÉTÉ DES VOLEURS :
PROPRIÉTÉ ET SOCIALISME SOUS STALINE

THE SOCIETY OF THIEVES

PROPERTY AND SOCIALISM
UNDER STALIN

Juliette Cadiot explores economic crime in the Stalinist USSR at the end of WWII. In particular, she is interested in the "theft of socialist property" and the fierce repression of the Stalinist authorities against these particular crimes. Drawing on anecdotes and life stories from recently opened Russian and Ukrainian judicial archives, she offers vivid insight into the material condition of the Soviets, which was based on the need to steal in order to survive, regardless of one's social position.
