Fayard

Librairie Arthème Fayard was founded in 1857 with the goal of making books accessible to everyone. In addition to different historical works, it also published popular novels. Arthème Fayard, its founder, died in 1895. His successor (who also inherited his name) developed classic and contemporary editions at discount prices, published foreign literature, and created and directed a series of detective novels up until his death in 1936. Fayard became a limited liability company in 1956 and a subsidiary of Hachette in 1958. Today, its catalogue includes French and foreign classics, contemporary literature, and titles in the fields of history, science, music, human sciences, and current events.

ENDORPHINS

While his team from the criminal brigade is busy investigating a vast pimping network and a trail of corpses between Marseille and Toulouse, Chief Inspector Henri Saint-Donat is sent by his senior officer to Quebec to attend a convention and, above all, to make peace with himself. There, he is starting to wonder whether or not it's time to put an end to his career. But when his closest colleague is kidnapped and threatened with imminent death, Saint-Donat's cop instincts kick into high gear...

MUSIC, A FIGHT FOR LIFE

World-renowned violinist Zhang Zhang gives a daring account of the violence of the Cultural Revolution. Born to a musician father and to a star actress of propaganda films, she was soon forced into a life of exile with her parents, forced to say goodbye to her homeland and her brother. In this family where music counted above all else, Zhang's despotic father made her practice for hours, to the point of making her hate the violin... Until the day it became her way to emancipation.

THE EARTH IS RUNNING OUT OF WATER

Drawing on the expertise of specialists, Erik Orsenna takes us on a tour of the world's great rivers, reminding us that they are the faithful reflection of the face of the planet. With his 33 river portraits, Orsenna zooms in on the sources of their problems – shortages, pollution, and growing numbers of dams destroying natural resources and landscapes – to come to a chilling conclusion: conflicts today often stem from water itself, from both its scarcity and its distribution.
