BIEF is the professional association responsible for promoting French publishing on the international scene. Our activities serve our vocation: to encourage and develop trade between French and foreign publishers. Many French publishers of Non-Fiction (Human and Social Sciences, Law, etc.) have decided to present a selection of their books in this publication, both backlist and new titles which they believe will interest foreign publishers because of their subjects, authors, etc. As well as a short text about the book and its cover, you will find the details of those to contact in each publishing house and general information about the publisher’s list. This catalogue is intended for all those who have an interest in French editorial production in the domain of Non-Fiction. The information provided here is also available on the BIEF website (bief.org). These titles, and so much more, may also be found at booksfromfrance.fr, a tool to facilitate rights acquisitions.

Actes Sud

Hubert Nyssen and Christine Le Bœuf, joined by Françoise Nyssen, Bertrand Py, and Jean-Paul Capitani, founded Actes Sud in 1978 and developed the company into a general publishing house. Far from Paris, Actes Sud also stands out thanks to its graphic identity and the choice to open the catalogue up to foreign literatures. Actes Sud continues to develop, driven by a desire for independence and discovery. The catalogue reserves a fundamental place for literature and welcomes authors from many artistic disciplines.

The Polar Bear: Vagabond of Snow and Ice
L'ours polaire, vagabond des glaces

Rémy Marion
2024/320 pages
9782330185602/€22.5

An embodied text that shines the spotlight on field experience, to try to better understand the private life of this formidable mammal. Rémy Marion recounts his encounters with polar bears in the Arctic, which he has been traveling for over 30 years. He deconstructs its image as a “symbol of global warming”: polar bears are under threat, but no more so than the other inhabitants of the Arctic. If the polar bear goes extinct, that won’t drastically change the Arctic ecosystem, but we humans will have lost a millenary landmark and an indispensable anchor.

* Vivent les corneilles.
* Plaidoyer pour une cohabitation responsable

Frédéric Jiguet, Guillaume Reynard (illustrations)
2024/176 pages
9782330185619/€21

Frédéric Jiguet recounts in great detail the lives of these often unpopular birds and invites us to rediscover the City of Light through their eyes.

An ornithologist, the author was tasked with the mission to observe the behavior and daily life of crows by the city of Paris. He offers up a summary of this research and provides recommendations for a harmonious cohabitation between humans and birds in France’s capital city.

Nature and Prejudice:
* Inviting Humanity into Natural History
* Nature et préjugés.
* Convier l’humanité dans l’histoire naturelle

Marc-André Selosse, Arnaud Rafaelian (illustrations), Erik Orsenna (foreword)
2024/448 pages
9782330185619/€25

A deconstruction, with humor and goodwill, of the prejudices that have prevented us from understanding nature and adjusting our actions accordingly.

Marc-André Selosse takes a step toward the humanities to try to think about the upheavals and changes of the 21st century through the eyes of a naturalist. Each chapter is dedicated to a preconceived idea that has prevented us from seeing nature (including human nature) as it really is, oversimplifications that have widely circulated during the modern era and are partially responsible for the directional errors that have led to the crises we are experiencing today.
L’événement spatial, relancé par des milliardaires venus de la Tech, entend renouer avec les promesses d’Apollo : un jour, les humains pourront s’installer sur la Lune, Mars ou n’importe quel corps céleste.

À l’heure du dérèglement climatique, ces nouveaux conquistadores nous vendent leur solution pour l’avenir : pour sauver la Terre, il faut coloniser l’espace.

L’emergence de ce nouvel âge spatial, avec la montée en puissance d’entrepreneurs comme Jeff Bezos, Elon Musk ou Richard Branson, n’est pas une bonne nouvelle. Ces derniers vantent les mérites d’un avenir radieux où l’humanité, devenue interplanétaire, s’est émancipée de tout ce qui la menace. Mais ces visions, nourries d’images anachroniques, témoignent avant tout d’une forme de nostalgie pour un futur qui n’a aucun sens. Faut que les obsolètes. Ce que la conquête de l’espace nous dit de l’avenir remonte aux sources de l’imaginaire spatial pour interroger notre quête de liberté dans les espaces extra-terrestres. Il confronte également les promesses de ces “astropreneurs” au droit, aux limites physiques imposées par l’espace, ou encore à l’absurdité de leurs modèles économiques censés faire de l’exploitation des corps célestes des gisements inépuisables de richesses pour nos sociétés.
Adverbum

Created in 1989, Adverbum is a French publishing company that is comprised of four publishers: Éditions DésIris (sciences, health, sports, human sciences, functional anatomy), Éditions Le Sureau (cookbooks, lifestyle), Éditions Grégoriennes (religion, metaphysics, religious art), and Atelier Perrousseaux Éditeur (typography, DTP, graphic arts, semiology). Course thérapeutique. Une foulée pour tout changer

Frédéric Brigaud
2023/192 pages
9782364032163/€17
Éditions Désiris

Therapeutic running, or the art of rediscovering the benefits of the forefoot stride.

More than just running, it’s the way that matters and that shapes us. Developing a forefoot stride is a long process during which a slow transformation of the body takes place. This stride is a new therapy that is part and parcel of a new art of running.

But running economy also depends on elements that develop with quadruped or climbing exercises and that improve the dynamics of running.
This Revelation has a logical structure, the signature of the Logos whose word has awakened human intelligence from century to century! Everyone has heard of the Beatitudes proclaimed by Jesus to his disciples as the “inaugural discourse” of his teaching. The first intention of this discourse is to reveal Jesus as Messiah. The second is to lead the disciples to a profound conversion towards Wisdom. There are several paths with a journey of spiritual initiation, whose goal is precisely a “happiness” that ordinary experience ignores but that Revelation brings within our reach.

Great Treatise on Cucurbits: Melons, Cucumbers, Gourds, Pumpkins, and More, From Small Cucamelons to Large Pumpkins

Mireille Gayet
2024/212 pages
9782364022102/€39
Éditions Le Sureau

Everything you need to know about cucurbits, from the art of cooking them to how to turn them into artistic objects or musical instruments! This great treatise on cucurbits focuses on those used for culinary or artistic purposes. It retraces their incredible diversity and their histories, from their country of origin to our plates, to tell a story where taste and health are not in competition – quite the opposite. Mireille Gayet’s watercolors wonderfully reflect this colorful world with great subtlety. Here, the author puts her scientific research and culinary skills to good use.

A Thousand Origins
Mille Origines

Charif Majdalani
2023/240 pages
9782227500877/€19

A book about multiculturalism in the heart of the emblematic city of Beirut.

Charif Majdalani is passionate about cultural blends, in all their richness, humor, and complexity. His reflections focus on Beirut, his city, his home, so emblematic of these intersecting populations. He meets some twenty people who tell him their stories of exile, war, multiple religious identities, and thwarted love. The author paints a kaleidoscopic portrait of Beirut and of Lebanon, just like the infinite crossroads that come together all over the world.
Stories and great texts help us understand the world.
Delphine Horvilleur questions how we understand the world, and how we tell it. Rabbis know the importance of storytelling better than anyone. So she talks about her profession as a woman rabbi, defining it as an act of listening and openness. Texts seek to establish a link between generations, the fact that each one is different, and that the world needs updates. Reconstructing the meaning of words to make them relevant.

Philippe Grandcolas, Claire Marc
2023/140 pages
9782271146816/€18

A clear and concise graphic work to learn everything there is to know about biodiversity, the other major environmental issue of our era.

Isn’t it dangerous to be more concerned about the polar bear than the dung beetle? What role do microorganisms play in the health of animals and soils? How quickly does all of this evolve? What makes a species go extinct and how do we know if a species is endangered? What are the consequences? And... what can we do about it?

This work reflects what we really know about biodiversity, as well as how this knowledge came to be.

The Edifying Image:
The Role of Reference Images in Architecture
L’Image édifiante.
Le rôle des images de référence en architecture

Anne Frémy
2023/168 pages
9782375560440/€29

Between esthetics and architectural theory, this essay sheds light on the relationship between architects and images. The artist and theorist Anne Frémy, who regularly works with architects as an iconographer, explores the tension between the tangible images before their eyes and the mental images that convey the architect’s developing vision, which is initially hazy, vague, and intuitive. This richly illustrated work calls upon many other iconographic traditions associated with space to shed light on the conceptual and operational role of images in the process of architectural creation.

Avec Alberti. Considerations intempestives sur l’architecture

Arnoldo Rivkin, Pierre Caye
2024/264 pages
9782375560457/€29

Alberti’s treatise sheds light from afar on contemporary architectural practices in the face of technological, urban, and environmental issues. The race toward digital innovation, the explosion of urban planning, and the global environmental crisis form a context in which the architect struggles to find his place. But what if, on the contrary, this millenary culture was overflowing with ideas and alternative tools? Let’s rediscover one of the discipline’s canonical texts: De re aedificatoria by Leon Battista Alberti. These concepts enable us to rethink the scales, which are too often disjointed in our built environments.

Jean Zetlaoui, Françoise Fromonot
2023/280 pages
9782375560525/€25
Co-edition with Centre Georges-Pompidou

A young architect wanders Paris’s empty central neighborhood, documenting the spontaneous and temporary urban life that unfolds there.

For his capstone project in architecture in 1970-1971, Jean Zetlaoui chose to work on the Halles/Beaubourg neighborhood. The wholesale market had already moved to Rungis, but the Pavillons Baltard were still standing. The Centre Pompidou had not yet been built or even completely planned out, but urban renovations had already left a vast informal parking lot. Armed with his camera, Zetlaoui created an astonishing photographic census of this neighborhood on hold.

An investigation to observe the world’s cities at “urban ground floor” a crucial interface of the urban experience.
Why are our urban and suburban landscapes so inhospitable?
In the face of the upcoming transitions, it is imperative to reform the methods behind urban projects. David Mangin and Soraya Boudjenane propose to introduce the notion of “urban ground floor”, which enables us to rethink public spaces, the interiors of blocks, ground floors, underground networks, built settings, and urban practices. A comparative investigation that examines urban ground floor on four continents, to rethink the city.

Michel Vernes, Manuel Charpy
2023/92 pages
9782375560419/€37

32 major texts to explore the eclectic and truant work of Michel Vernes.
Convinced that poetic writing is more capable of reproducing an architectural element than photography, Michel Vernes was truly a writer of architecture. This collection, along with an unprecedented iconography, offers an overview of his original, demanding, eclectic, and truant thought, and highlights his primary working themes. Between art and architecture, city and landscape, these learned and unusual texts invite us to explore roads less travelled where the mind learns by wandering.

A playful and instructive dive into the thoughts and actions of Antoinette Fouque, a key figure in the Women’s Liberation Movement. From the creation of physical and symbolic places for women to Antoinette Fouque’s conceptual input, let’s take a journey through her battles for women’s rights. Here, her intellectual contributions to women’s liberation are explored through leading concepts in her thought. She was never content to simply describe the oppressions that women suffered; she sought to analyze the root causes and come up with paths to liberation in order to permanently transform society.

The Racial Burden:
An Overwhelming Silence
La charge raciale. Vertige d’un silence écrasant

Douce Dibondo
2024/270 pages
9782213726724/€20

When the racism eating away at our society becomes unbearable, Douce Dibondo offers a life-saving survival guide for future emancipation.

Does racism have two faces? On one hand, the racism of explicit, brutal violence, and too many deaths and aggressions. And on the other, the racism of a common, quieter violence that worms its way into everyday relationships and hinders the construction of one’s identity. In this essay, Douce Dibondo reveals the silence surrounding the hidden wound of the racial burden and demonstrates its full impact through lively language, blending psychoanalysis, art, and personal accounts.

Are we not all a little bit prone to superstition? This book guides us through the diversity of meanings attached to superstition.
Rituals used to predict the future or protect oneself from disease may be considered superstitious by some but religious or folkloric by others. Philippe Martin lets theologians, sociologists, and philosophers speak for themselves as they describe the phenomenon as a way of coping with anxiety, as well as superstitious people. In doing so, he shows how the word draws a line between what is licit and illicit, accepted or not, and outlines the horizon of a world to which we aspire.

In this original and easy-to-read book, Nassim El Kabli enlightens us as to the “real jobs” of philosophers. What were the jobs of the philosophers we still read and study today? Some of them are consistent with the idea people might have of a professional philosopher (anatomist or mathematician, lawyer, diplomat, journalist, or priest). Others are more unusual, ranging from a jazz pianist to an emperor, or a cyclist to a motorbike mechanic. The question is rarely asked, because all too often we forget that we cannot live on wisdom alone.

Take a Break! Tips to Align Your Life
Pause. Pour une vie alignée

Alexandre Mars
2024/216 pages
9782213727028/€19

Alexandre Mars demonstrates how each of our flaws and assets is necessary for leading an aligned life. In this book, successful entrepreneur Alexandre Mars speaks to those who doubt. He demystifies preconceived ideas surrounding success, which sometimes seems overwhelming. After all, when we see the glamor and power in success, we often overlook the years of struggle, the hard work, the lack of inspiration, the doubts, and the failures behind it. In the end, taking a break in life can be salutary.

Les Génies des mers. Quand les animaux marins défient les sciences

Bill François
2023/272 pages
9782080264022/€25

At a time when humanity challenges living species to survive our destructive madness, this book is an invitation to learn to see the extraordinary genius and the stunning beauty of what surrounds us. This illustrated book is a modern rereading of marine biodiversity, revealing the science behind sea species’ behaviors as well as their interactions with each other and the world above sea level. The physics, chemistry, and mechanics of the turtle, the krill, the albatross, and dozens of species more or less known to the general public become a fascinating story, beautifully illustrated by Valentine Plessy.

Les Légendes du siècle. Une histoire des Jeux en douze médailles

Fabien Archambault
2024/280 pages
9782080429070/€19

Another history of the Games. What images are historically associated with the Olympic Games? The answer will always be the raised, black-gloved fists of two American sprinters in Mexico City; often the hostage-taking of Israeli athletes by a Palestinian commando in Munich; or sometimes the bloody water polo match between the USSR and Hungary in Melbourne. This book analyzes some of these episodes and attempts to solve a mystery: why did the Olympic movement end up with global resonance when it should have disappeared?

Éditions Autrement

The first book about the Nardal sisters, pioneers of the Black Cause in 1930s Paris. Paulette, Emilie, Alice, Jane, Cécile, Lucie and Andrée: why have the Nardal sisters been erased from militant history in favour of Aimé Césaire and Léopold Sédar Senghor? What were their differences? From Fort-de-France to Paris, via England and the United States where Paulette became a member of the UN, Léa Mormin-Chauvac retraces their lives and pays tribute to these women, symbols of the feminist and anti-racist struggles.

_A powerful text inspired by travels around the world and international comparisons._

Erik Orsenna and Julien Denormandie share a passion for agriculture, the nurturing mother of human societies. It is for them a formidable object of study, the basis of a fascinating reflection on the contradictions that characterize the relationship between people today and those who feed them. This little agronomic and literary handbook feels a bit like a manifesto for reconciling our society with the many faces of agriculture, which is so poorly regarded today.

_The true novel of Antiquity: a narrative and philosophical tour de force._

This book recounts the life of Apollonius of Tyana, a wise healer who lived between Ephesus and Antioch in the first century AD. With his faithful disciple Damis, Apollonius traveled the world to seek and teach wisdom. Written like a novel with lots of dialogue, the book is based on ancient sources. Revealing the extraordinary scope of ancient spirituality and restoring one of its masters forgotten by History, _Apollonius_ is a fictional tour de force, inspired by Yourcenar and Eco.

The Genocide Against the Tutsi

The facts, causes, and consequences of the genocide in Rwanda analyzed by a group of authors.
In spring 1994, Rwanda suffered a major tragedy: a genocide that decimated most of the Tutsi population. Here, the authors explore the shock that these events engendered: their own speechlessness; the ways in which these massacres oriented their research, writing, or creations; and the cultural, ideological, social, and political roots behind this genocide. Because this mass crime was the fruit of a complex chain of causalities.

Ever since the Snowden Affair, secret documents have been subject to leaks. Could the State today be a transparent State, stripped of its mysteries?
The State has always had its reasons and secrets: the State’s reasoning authorized diplomatic, police, or military actions whose success resided in their secrecy. Enter the political liberalism of the 18th century. Secrets were recognized and institutionalized and the secret State was born. Enter the shift to our era of neoliberalism that imposed the ideology of transparency with respect to public action. The clandestine State was born in the shadows. And democracy was permanently weakened.

The Defeat of the West
La Défaite de l’Occident

Emmanuel Todd
2024/384 pages
9782073041135/€23

A profoundly original essay that draws on resources from critical economics, religious sociology, and depth anthropology.
The defeat of the West is twofold: an external defeat (the war in Ukraine) but above all an internal defeat (the demographic, moral, and economic decline of Western societies). In this work, the author makes an argued case against the leading classes of the West. Readers will rediscover that which makes Emmanuel Todd’s method so relevant and efficient: analysis of familial models, statistics, and the bigger picture, all with uncommon scholarship.

A long-view worldwide history, both religious and geopolitical, of cathedrals.
Founded between the 4th and the 5th centuries, cathedrals have been coveted by national powers. Although they remain the symbol of a Church’s influence in a place, with globalization, they have proven to be universal in nature. Starting in the 19th century, a patrimonial revolution began to take shape, as demonstrated by the Notre-Dame fire and the staggering donations to rebuild it: the cathedral now asserts itself as a worldwide cultural object, a touristic and media icon.

Essay
Man Diminished by AI
L’Homme diminué par l’IA

Marius Bertolucci
2023/232 pages
9791037031570/€22

An essay that presents the extraordinary potential as well as the dangers of AI, all while pleading for strict controls of its use.
Artificial intelligence is everywhere. Its abilities are developing exponentially in all fields. The countless forms of AI that are accessible to the general public reveal the challenges of human/algorithm cohabitation: studies show that constant exposure to AI diminishes our capacity to create, learn, and think, and alters our social ties and autonomy.
A short essay questioning the slide, in the era of globalization, from art towards culture.

Once upon a time, humanity distinguished the arts from other artisanal or industrial production (art and non-art), and organized each type of art into a hierarchy that varied depending on the civilization and era. With globalization, a new paradigm seems to have taken root: a paradigm of the “all-cultural”, which mixes all aspects of creation together, in which the beautiful infiltrates even artisanal and industrial spheres that don’t claim to be “artistic”.

A reflection on what it means to interpret a religious text, with openness.
The rabbi and the shrink: two professions that represent the promise of revealing meaning. To this end, patients often ask their psychoanalyst to reveal the meaning of their dreams to them. In truth, the doctor is never the bearer of a single “true” interpretation or authentic meaning. Contrary to this theory, which confines interpretation in a sterile and deaf fidelity, Rabbi Horvilleur invites us to open up to the diversity of meaning.

The genesis of the Arab-Israeli conflict remains little-known. A cultural confrontation covered up by a “religious” conflict and polemics regarding the Zionist project crystallized at the end of WWI. But it took shape well before 1914 in the discourse of the Arab elite, the Sephardic Jewish community, and the Zionists of Central Europe. Georges Bensoussan shows that this discourse falls short in truly grasping this history, by revealing the importance of cultural and anthropological dimensions.

Sylvain Tesson’s great romantic maritime book.

“Summer had just begun when I went to look for the fairies on the Atlantic coast. I don’t believe in them; our modern eyes no longer perceive such phantasmagoria. The word fairy suggests reality revealed through a certain visual angle. A way of perceiving the world and discerning the miracle of the immemorial, and of perfection. Fairies appear because we look at nature with deference. Since night had fallen on this world, I gave myself three months to try and observe it. I left. With the fairies.”

Ever since #MeToo, a certain strain of feminism no longer sees woman as a subject free to embrace her desires, but as a fragile being subjected to the injunctions of the patriarchy made responsible for her condition. Far from the call to arms for the right to vote or sexual freedom and equality, this new feminism also fails to understand the complexity of the sex/gender relationship, and therefore that of the process of sexuation, always marked by enigmatic subconscious identifications.

The Russian invasion showed us how poorly we understand Ukraine. Starting with preconceived ideas, the author paints a well-documented portrait.

Ukraine has been at the heart of international news since the Russian invasion on February 24, 2022. The numerous debates following this invasion demonstrated the extent to which our knowledge of this country has often been limited to clichés: a cradle for Russia, a land of Cossacks, the USSR’s breadbasket, corrupt governments, and the scene of a new cold war. Deconstructing these preconceived ideas, Alexandra Goujon paints a well-documented portrait of this country.

Capitalism and racism have been indissociable since 1492, as this book demonstrates by retracing their entwined destinies. We still often see the crossing of the Atlantic Ocean in 1492 as a “closing” of the world. But it was actually the double advent of capitalism and racism. In the tradition of heterodox thinkers such as Rosa Luxembourg and W.E.B. Du Bois, Sylvie Laurent revisits classical authors and questions figures of colonization, such as Christopher Columbus or Robinson Crusoe, suggesting that there cannot be a capitalistic appropriation of the land without a reasoned system of expropriation and domination.

Romain Bertrand plunges us into a fascinating world of merchants, poets, and pirates. And ruins any ideas of “Great Discoveries” for a long time. The notion of “Great Discoveries” is not only a 19th-century literary invention. It has often been said that in the 16th century, France missed its meeting with Asia. Yet, as early as the 1830s, French scholars and polemicists found a champion in the person of Jean Parmentier, who, in 1529, rallied Sumatra’s shores. The diplomatic, financial, and human outcome was, however, catastrophic. An investigation that reveals unexpected intellectual and social worlds.

An analysis of the facts, and nothing but the facts.
What is the United States’ true strategy in this war? What is Russia’s approach when it comes to military operations? Why has it always been impossible to negotiate and when might it become possible? To answer all of these questions and many more, Jacques Baud draws on information from Western intelligence services and American documents that were leaked in April 2023.
What are the root causes of the war in Ukraine and the reasons that led Vladimir Putin to take action on February 24, 2022?
Jacques Baud analyzes the sequence of military actions and how they have been interpreted in the West. He explains the overturning of the world order in politics and economics, as well as the long-term consequences of Western sanctions on our daily lives. He reveals how the conflict could have been avoided and which avenues were deliberately neglected by the United States and Europe.

Has Vladimir Putin become the master of the game?
Jacques Baud reviews the events in Russia’s recent history that led to the war in Ukraine. He analyzes the different bones of contention between the West and Russia, and sheds light on Putin’s role on the international scene today. This book is structured around questions related to current events, which facilitate balanced explanations of events that sometimes cast a very different light from that of the media.
California Dream: Journey to the Land of the Dreamers of the Future
California Dream. Voyage chez les rêveurs d’avenir

Pascal Dibie
2023/200 pages
9791022613101/€18

A tender look at an attempt to build a more habitable world that is more respectful of nature. A text that resonates with current debates.

A young ethnologist is sent to Berkeley in the 1980s to investigate “human ecology”. Along the way, he experiences tender and comical adventures, which his sharp ethnologist’s eye and curious and amused writing style will turn into a kind of ecological fable. As we emerge from this eminently human and political work, we can’t help but wonder why we didn’t heed or take these “dreamers of the future” seriously, who warned us about the catastrophic state of affairs in which we find ourselves today.
A great anthropologist of the body unveils the mysteries behind one of the most beautiful of human actions: the smile. David Le Breton continues his anthropology of the body in an even more refined and literary way. Here, only lived experiences and quotes from writers, filmmakers, or painters that describe on the spot hundreds of smiles that hide contradictory meanings. This anthropology of the enigmatic touches upon social conventions and interactions, but also our true and naïve spirituality that helps us to both exist within and resist the world, and to communicate ourselves to others.
Christophe André offers a completely refreshed definition of self-esteem.

Christophe André is a psychiatrist, former practitioner at Hôpital Sainte-Anne in Paris, and author of several huge international bestsellers in psychology. André shows here how self-esteem should become a sort of breath of the mind, spontaneous, natural, and invigorating. “Something that is there to help you live, but that you don’t have to focus on. Something you simply come back to from time to time, before returning to things more interesting than yourself: the world, other people, life.”

For a Subjective Approach to International Relations
Pour une approche subjective des relations internationales

Bertrand Badie
2023/144 pages
97824150007218/€16.9

Geopolitics are dead!
Bertrand Badie is a university professor at Sciences Po in Paris and known as a leading expert in international relations. In this short and innovative book, he deconstructs the notion of geopolitics as it is usually defined. For him, understanding and mastering international relations must henceforth be based fundamentally on subjectivities. An instruction manual for this total change of approach.

The Last Neanderthal: Understanding How Man Dies
Le Dernier Néandertalien. Comprendre comment meurent les Hommes

Ludovic Slimak
2023/304 pages
9782415004927/€22.9

A masterful archeological saga, which calls into question the Neanderthal extinction scenario and offers a new look at the nature of modern humanity.

One of the world’s leading specialists on Neanderthal societies, Slimak plunges us into the major discovery of his career: the body of Thorin, possibly one of the last Neanderthals. Through this discovery, which compels researchers to radically rewrite the history of the last Neanderthals, Slimak draws new knowledge about their way of living and thinking, how this multi-millenial society died out with the arrival of Homo sapiens, and takes us across the millennia to discover our own humanity.

9782415006907/€23.9

A book that returns personal experience and wonder to the heart of science.

The author recounts her journey as a little girl and as a researcher, full of domestic and wild animals, which led her to solve, in over 25 years, numerous scientific enigmas about animals who manipulate, steal, hunt and fish, perform, and protect.
In 1852, Henri Plon and his two brothers founded Éditions Plon, and were awarded the title of the Emperor’s publisher. Plon is a leader in France in the field of political, economic, and societal documents. Its prestigious collections feature authors such as Claude Lévi-Strauss or Simone Weil, and the works of several French Presidents and titles by women in their entourage. Plon’s non-fiction is very famous for the renown of most of its authors: Luc Ferry, Frédéric Lenoir, Étienne Klein, and more recently, Gilles Kepel, Marc Dugain, and Anne Fulda. What are miracles really made of? Why are we so interested in these phenomena?

We are all curious, fascinated, challenged by these unexplained phenomena. In truth, miracles are not just for believers, they tell us something about ourselves. Isn’t looking miracles in the face to reflect on oneself? Miracles remain misunderstood, an enigma. How have they been received by the Church? How is it possible to certify them? This book sheds light on the sometimes complicated relationship between religious authorities and these phenomena at work.

“For a long time, I thought that I was the only person in the world to know Camus, to truly understand him, and that he wrote only for me. He consoles me. I understand him better than anyone. Others can’t really understand him – they haven’t experienced what he and I have experienced... Poverty, an illiterate mother, the pain of being torn between our original environment and the one to which we have access. But also the pain of being torn between two countries: France and Algeria.”

Monster, “The Match”, or Tinder: what do sorting algorithms do to social ties? Access to things like an education, a romantic partner, or even a transplant now depends on algorithms. Matching assumes that there is a symmetrical social relationship: we choose depending on the information at our disposal and at the same time, we are chosen based on the data we provide about ourselves. A principle that deeply modifies the relationship between the collective and the individual and accelerates the advent of a singularist society. Matching society is already here.

The Scouts in British Malaya: A History of the Cultural Globalization of the Youth
Des Scouts en Malaisie britannique. Une histoire de la mondialisation culturelle de la jeunesse

Christina Jialin Wu
2024/296 pages
9782724641950/€26

A subtle social and global history of colonization and decolonization. Starting with oral sources and unpublished writings, this book offers an original history of the circulation of ideas and models, from the universal to the local. The paradoxical duality of scouting is thus revealed. A (nationalist) instrument dreamt up by Baden-Powell to serve imperial British society, the movement’s pedagogical and ideological model was transferred from Kuala Lumpur to Jakarta for specific national projects.

Invention of the French Economy
Invention de l’économie française

Thomas Angeletti
2023/260 pages
9782724641158/€26

Investigation into the birth of a subject that is omnipresent in public discourse: the French economy. How is the French economy doing? Analysts celebrate its growth, analyze its slowdowns, and identify precursory signs of a crisis. Indicators that are now familiar to us, such as the GDP, give it consistency. And yet, the notion of a national economy isn’t natural at all. This work aims to outline the contours of its “biography”, clarify its origins, highlight consequences of its emergence, and take away political lessons for the future.

Political History of Anti-Semitism in France: From 1967 to Today
Histoire politique de l’antisémitisme en France. De 1967 à nos jours

Alexandre Bande, Rudy Reichstadt
2024/384 pages
9782221269145/€22

An unprecedented approach to anti-Semitism: what is its place in French political life today?
While the question of anti-Semitism continues to be significant in our society, the discourse of certain parties and political figures sometimes remains ambiguous with respect to Jews. And although the bibliography for the history of this discourse is rich, no work to date offers an overview of the place of anti-Semitism in French political life. Here, the authors share interdisciplinary reflections that shed light on contemporary anti-Semitism within political parties and currents.

The Paradox of Laughter
Le paradoxe du rire

Olivia Gazalé
2024/416 pages
9782232146305/€22
Éditions Seghers

Is it possible to laugh without hurting anyone?
Laughter: an ancestral mystery and human specificity. Joyous or hateful, it varies from culture to culture. A weapon for defense or domination, laughter is plural and complex. Can we laugh at anything? Freedom of expression collides with respect for others. To kill laughter is to give in to censorship. Funny when it perturbs, it often disturbs.
Olivia Gazalé explores this enigma throughout history, from thinkers of Antiquity to comedians today.
This book talks about today, our asphyxiations, and our overwhelming need for air. A rather stifling atmosphere is in the process of becoming our everyday reality. And yet, we dream more than ever of breathing: detoxifying the soil, the sky, relationships, daily life... Just taking a deep breath in and out. Maybe we only talk to breathe, to make it all breathable. Say the word “breathe”, and the outside world comes running, hopeful, drawn, sucked in by the call of your lips.

An ode to being different and unique, to the unknown, to imperfection, to humanity, to solidarity, and to joy. Francesca Pollock is Ferdinand’s stepmother. Ferdinand is multi-disabled. At first, this book intended to speak to Ferdinand, who can’t talk or hear. But then, over the writing process, new words appeared to express the uniqueness of sharing his life. Francesca Pollock talks about Ferdinand: his way of being in the world, his passions (fridges, train stations, traveling), and his very particular approach to resolving problems and getting around difficulties.

What if, instead of turning the world upside down, begging put the world right side up again?
This book invites us to question and reflect upon this sharing of lives, to rethink the figure of the beggar and the practice of begging: not as the archetype of a reduced life, but as a form of a critical life that bears a renewed vision of the good life, on individual and collective levels.

Romain Bertrand
2020/144 pages
9782378560553/€14.5

Magellan, who set out for the route to India in 1519, didn’t go around the world.
Bertrand demonstrates that Magellan played a less decisive role than History books taught us. In fact, the explorer didn’t get past the Cape of Good Hope. It was a Spanish vessel under the command of Elcano that managed the feat. Here, Bertrand takes an innovative look at all of the protagonists on this journey, including the sailors and the populations they met. The Malayan world, which didn’t wait for Europeans to undergo its first “globalization”, regains part of its identity.
